Bowing to protests, board rescinds president's appointment

WASHINGTON | The board of trustees of the nation's premier school for the deaf voted Sunday to terminate the appointment of the incoming president who had been the subject of protests, the board announced.

The vote at Gallaudet University came after a daylong closed-door meeting that followed a month of protests by students and faculty members. Jane Fernandes, the school's former provost, was selected in May to take office in January.

"Although undoubtedly there will be some members of the community who have differing views on the meaning of this decision, we believe that it is a necessity at this point," the board said in a written statement.

Protesters have said Fernandes, 50, was a divisive and ineffective leader as provost. They said the board ignored surveys by students and faculty during the presidential search that called her "unacceptable." Earlier this month, the faculty voted by a margin of 82 percent for Fernandes to resign or be removed. Fernandes had refused to resign, saying it would hurt the university to allow protests to determine the school's leadership.

Celebrations broke out on campus when the decision was announced.

Professor Diane Morton, who joined protesters for a rally at the university gymnasium, said students were "elated" when protest leaders received the e-mailed announcement. (AP)

THREATS

Someone Ran Out of Sick Days

A Ludlow, Mass., teacher charged with making a bomb threat at the school where she works pleaded not guilty Thursday and was released from police custody. Tina Fisher was arrested Wednesday after, authorities said, she stuck a note to the wall at the East Street Elementary School that referenced the principal and said "bomb, boom." She had been held on bail and was released after her appearance Thursday in Palmer District Court. (AP)

Nurse, There Are Chew Marks on My Machine

An Ipswich, England, hospital is considering taking on dog and cat patients to make more money, the Press Association reported. Ipswich Hospital says it can use its state-of-the-art radiotherapy equipment to treat family pets with cancer whenever it is not being used. The hospital, which owes $45 million, said the move could earn it up to $94,000 a year, about the cost of two nurses' wages. Some aren't happy with the idea, however. (EXPRESS)

Ice Drink

OK, so ice bars aren't anything new, but they're always fun to look at, especially because there aren't any in D.C. Perhaps we're entitled, now that Melbourne, Australia, has one. Chill Out, where Holly Severson enjoyed a cocktail at -12 degrees Thursday, is made of more than 30 tons of ice, and is fitted with ice sculptures, chairs and a couch that weighs four tons. Patrons pay $22 for a half-hour visit, where they receive a free vodka or cocktail in special glasses made of ice. (EXPRESS)

THE ISSUES

See, the Economy Isn't That Bad

Don't feel like standing in line on Election Day? In Denver, those who took advantage of early voting Saturday could have gotten a limo ride to the polls. Fearing that new voting machines, new voting centers and a ballot full of measures could create gridlock Nov. 7, a coalition of advocacy groups offered door-to-door service to the city's six new voting centers. "Because of the long ballot, we're expecting long lines on Election Day," Lindsey Hodel, a spokeswoman for the limo effort, said Friday. (AP)

WASHINGTON

Scientists Leaving NIH Over Change to Ethics Rules

Nearly 40 percent of the scientists conducting hands-on research at the National Institutes of Health say they are looking for other jobs or are considering doing so to escape new ethics rules that have curtailed their opportunity to earn outside income. Most scientists say the ethics crackdown is too severe, and nearly three-quarters of them believe it will hinder the government's ability to attract and keep medical researchers, a new survey says. The tightened rules were put in place last year after NIH found dozens of scientists had run afoul of existing restrictions. (AP)

State Bans Sex-Offenders From Halloween Activities

Sex offenders on probation or parole in Tennessee are banned from Halloween costume parties this year and aren't even allowed to put up decorations like jack-o-lanterns that might attract youngsters. The new state guidelines are meant to clarify policies that prevent offenders from interacting with children, said Board of Probation and Parole officials, and were not enacted in response to any specific problems the board has seen during the Halloween season. New York issued similar Halloween restrictions for sex offenders this year and imposed a 3 p.m. to 6 a.m. Halloween curfew on them. (AP)

Parties Spar Ahead of Key Election

Democrats claim the momentum, GOP says its base will mobilize

WASHINGTON | Republicans on Sunday said a major voter turnout effort would help them stay in power after the Nov. 7 elections, while Democrats claimed momentum as they seek to tap into voter unhappiness over Iraq.

Both sides agreed that the war in Iraq was a leading, if not central, issue in the contests to decide control of the House and Senate.

"This election is becoming more and more a referendum on George Bush, his failed policies both overseas and at home with a rubber stamp Congress," said Sen. Charles Schumer of New York, head of the Senate Democratic campaign committee.

His Republican counterpart, Sen. Elizabeth Dole of North Carolina, Sen. Elizabeth Dole, R-N.C., and Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., left, meet with National Press Club President Jonathan Salant at a debate in Washington last week.

said Iraq and the broader fight against terrorism were important issues, but "President Bush's name is not on the ballot." Democrats, she said, were trying "to make it a national referendum."

Schumer and Dole, who appeared on "Fox News Sunday" were among the politicians and party leaders who sparred on the Sunday talk shows.

The Washington Post

Democrats need a gain of 15 seats to win control of the 435-member House and six seats to claim the 100-member Senate.

With approval slumping for both the war and the president, recent polls show Democrats have their best chance to reclaim the House since the GOP swept them from power in 1994, and a shot at capturing the Senate as well.

As the candidates entered their final full week of campaigning, House Democrats worked to emphasize the GOP role in the Iraq war.

Democrat Leads N.J. Senate Race

TRENTON, N.J. | Sen. Robert Menendez holds a slight lead over Republican Tom Kean Jr. in their Senate race with just over a week left before election day, a poll published Sunday found.

Democrat Menendez leads Kean 48-42 percent, according to a poll of 600 likely voters published Sunday in The Record of Bergen County.

issue in deciding their vote. Voters also want to see Democrats in control Congress, 53-35 percent.

President Bush remains unpopular, with only 37 percent saying he was doing an excellent or good job. Menendez's campaign strategy has been dominated by efforts to tie Kean to Bush administration policies, while Kean has painted Menendez as a corrupt politician.

The poll had a margin of error of plus or minus four percentage points. (AP)

Campaigning on Rumsfeld

Secretary of Defense draws praise, criticism ahead of fall elections

WASHINGTON | The No. 2 leader in the House on Sunday said Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld is "the best thing that's happened to the Pentagon in 25 years," sparking a debate with Democrats who said the comments show why the GOP should be voted out of power.

Rumsfeld's leadership of the bloody mission in Iraq has become a divisive issue in the Nov. 7 elections. Many Democrats and a few Republicans are calling for his resignation, but President Bush repeatedly has defended him. So did House

Majority Leader John Boehner, R-Ohio, during an appearance Sunday on ABC's "This Week."

"I think Donald Rumsfeld is the best thing that's happened to the Pentagon in 25 years," Boehner said. "This Pentagon and our military needs a transformation. And I think Donald Rumsfeld's the only man in America who knows where the bodies are buried at the Pentagon, has enough experience to help transform that institution."

Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., said voters will have their chance to show if they agree with Boehner on Election Day.

"It's true President Bush may not be on the ballot, but people like Boehner and people who support Rumsfeld and Cheney and Bush, they're on the ballot," Rangel said on CNN's "Late Edition."

"And that's why we only get two years. You don't have to wait to get the president. This is a referendum on the war and the incompetency of the Bush administration."

One Republican, Maryland Senate candidate Michael Steele, declined to back the Pentagon chief.

"He wouldn't be my secretary of defense," Steele said on NBC's "Meet the Press." NEDRA PICKLER (AP)

Calif. Wildfires Now 70 Percent Contained

4 firefighters killed by a blaze authorities say was set intentionally

BEAUMONT, CALIF. | Firefighters aided by dying winds appeared to be winning the battle Sunday against a 63-square-mile wildfire that killed four of their own and destroyed more than 30 homes.

The 40,450-acre blaze, which authorities say was set by an arsonist, was 70 percent contained four days after blowtorch gusts overran a U.S.

Forest Service crew. Four members were killed and a fifth was left clinging to life with burns over most of his body. The blaze was still threatening a wilderness area plagued by drought and filled with dead trees, but fire officials were confident that if they could keep it out of that area they could have it under control by Tuesday night.

As firefighters were getting the upper hand on that blaze, another broke out Sunday in Warner Springs, about 70 miles northeast of San Diego. ALLISON HOFFMAN (AP)

Inmate Charged In Tattooing of Convicted Rapist

COLUMBUS, IND. | An inmate accused of forcibly tattooing a slain 10-year-old girl's name onto her killer's forehead in an Indiana prison was the victim's cousin, a family friend said.

Jared Harris, 22, is a cousin of Katlyn "Katie" Collman, a family friend and spokesman said.

Harris, 22, who is serving time on a burglary conviction at Wabash Valley state prison in Carlisle, has been charged with battery and accused of tattooing "KATIE'S REVENGE" across Anthony Ray Stockelman's forehead.

Stockelman is serving a life sentence after pleading guilty to abducting, molesting and killing the fourth-grader, who lived about 70 miles south of Indianapolis. She was missing for five days before her body was found Jan. 30, 2005, in a creek about 15 miles from her home. (AP)

Sleep deprivation has rapid & brief antidepressant effects in some depressed people. Firefighters examine damage after a 165-foot-tall crane toppled in high winds onto three houses in Portland, Maine, on Sunday. No one in the houses was injured.

2 Dead as Winds Batter East Coast

Storm system causes blackouts for thousands from Md. to Maine

NEW YORK | Thousands of homes and businesses had no electricity Sunday from Maryland to Maine as a storm system blasted the region with winds gusting to more than 50 mph, knocking over trees and a construction crane. The storm was blamed for at least two deaths.

Gusts of 70 mph were possible Sunday in northern New York state, reported the National Weather Service.

A falling tree killed a motorcyclist in Massachusetts, police said. In New Hampshire, one man was missing after falling off a cruise ship on Lake Winnepesaukee during the storm late Saturday, and one man drowned when his kayak overturned on a rain-swollen river, state officials said.

In hard-hit Maine, a 165-foot crane with a wrecking ball attached toppled in one of the most populous neighborhoods of Portland, falling on three houses. No injuries were reported. The wrecking ball narrowly missed a car.

Utilities in Maine reported 44,000 customers still in the dark at midday Sunday and gusts up to 50 mph were causing new failures even as crews tried to restore service.

New Jersey's Newark Liberty International Airport, one of three major airports for the New York City region, had delays of more than two hours, mostly for incoming flights, authorities said.

The wind, rain and snow were produced by a stronger-than-normal low pressure system that passed through Pennsylvania and New York on its way to southeastern Canada, the weather service said. (AP)

Sequoia Voting Systems, based in Oakland, Calif., said the Committee on Foreign Investment in the United States, or CFIUS, was conducting the formal inquiry into it as well as its parent software company, the Smartmatic Corp., at the firms' request after news articles suggested improper ties. (AP)

Nigerian Jet Carrying 104 Crashes

Deadly incident is third air disaster for nation in the last year

ABUJA, NIGERIA | A Nigerian airliner with 104 people on board slammed into the ground moments after takeoff on Sunday — the third deadly crash of a passenger plane in a little over a year in this West African nation known for its notoriously unsafe air industry. Six people survived, and the rest were believed dead.

Among those killed was the man regarded as the spiritual leader of Nigeria's Muslims, and thousands of people gathered at a regional airport to receive his body.

The Boeing 737 crashed one minute after taking off from Abuja airport, said Sam Adurogboye, an Aviation Ministry spokesman. President Olusegun Obasanjo ordered an immediate investigation into the cause of the crash, his spokeswoman Remi Oyo said.

Rescue workers found debris from the smashed plane, body parts and luggage strewn over an area the size of a football field. The plane went down inside the sprawling airport compound about two miles from the runway. Smoke rose from the aircraft's mangled and smoldering fuselage.

Emergency workers pulled blackened corpses from the wreckage, then covered the bodies with white sheets and hauled them away in stretchers.

Adurogboye said 104 passengers and crew had been aboard the doomed flight, and he knew of six survivors who had been taken to a hospital. "Obviously the rest are feared dead," he said.

The plane was bound for the northwest city of Sokoto, about 500 miles northwest of Abuja, state radio said, adding that it had gone down during a storm.

Landmark Vote for Congolese

Presidential runoff election is pivotal step for postwar transition

KINSHASA, CONGO | Congo's four-year postwar transition climaxed Sunday with a runoff election between a president and a rebel warlord, as voters held onto hope they will soon see the end of a decades-old cycle of war and despotism that has shadowed the heart of Africa.

The voting was largely peaceful, but there was no guarantee the violence was over. Forces loyal to 35-year-old President Joseph Kabila and 44-year-old Jean-Pierre Bemba — a former rebel leader who's now a vice president in a power-sharing government — battled in the run-up to the vote, and at least two deaths were reported Sunday.

Kabila and Bemba have promised a peaceful vote and pledged to accept the results.

Until a constitutional referendum last year, most people here had never voted in their lives.

Vote counting began across the country as polling centers shut down, and electoral workers tallied ballots by lantern and candlelight. Results are not expected for several days. HEIDI VOGT (AP)

Riot Police Dispatched After Woman Hurt in Bus Burning

France's interior minister sent riot police to patrol the southern port city of Marseille on Sunday after a group of marauding teenagers torched a bus, gravely burning a young woman. ## Attacks Leave 23 Iraqi Police Dead

Sunni VP threatens to quit if al-Maliki does not act to curb militias

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Suspected Sunni Arab gunmen killed 23 policemen Sunday, including 17 in one attack in the predominantly Shiite southern city of Basra, signaling the possible start of an intensified insurgent campaign against Iraq's predominantly Shiite Muslim security forces.

Political tension deepened in Baghdad when Vice President

Tariq al-Hashemi, the country's highest-ranking Sunni politician, threatened to resign if Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki did not act quickly to eradicate two feared Shiite militias.

Al-Maliki, a Shiite, depends heavily on the backing of the two Shiite political parties that run the militias and has resisted U.S. pressure to eradicate the private armies — the Mahdi Army of radical cleric Muqtada al-Sadr and the Badr Brigade, the military wing of Iraq's biggest Shiite political bloc, the Supreme Council for the Islamic Revolution in Iraq.

Thirty-three people in all were slain across Iraq on Sunday in a second day of rising violence that ended a five-day lull in attacks after the end of the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

Among the day's attacks, gunmen in the southern city of Basra dragged 15 policemen and two translators — instructors at the police academy — off a bus at the edge of town. Their bodies were found dumped throughout the city beginning about four hours later. STEVEN R. HURST (AP)

Brazil's President Wins Re-Election

Leftist Lula easily defeats center-right rival in runoff election

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL | President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva was re-elected in a landslide Sunday as Brazilians rewarded their first working class leader for helping ease grinding poverty and improving the economy of Latin America's largest nation.

The leftist former union leader, who had the support of tens of millions of poor voters, easily topped center-right rival Geraldo Alckmin, whose tepid campaign style and robotic image failed to win over ordinary Brazilians.

Silva had 61 percent support compared to 39 percent for Alckmin, Sao Paulo state's former governor, with 99 percent of the votes counted. Election officials declared Silva the winner.

"We're going to do a lot better in my second term than we did in the first," Silva told cheering support-

New Calls for Israeli President To Leave Office

JERUSALEM | Israeli President Moshe Katsav faced the strongest pressure yet to step down on Sunday, when Israel's attorney general urged him to step aside while an indictment on rape and other serious charges is taking shape.

Though Attorney General Meni Mazuz's recommendation cannot force Katsav from office, it adds an influential voice to the growing chorus of officials who have called for the president to resign.

In a statement late Sunday, Katsav rejected the attorney general's recommendation, saying it was "the obligation of the authorities to do everything to seek the truth and not allow a media lynching to disrupt the investigation of the truth."

Police recommended two weeks ago that the president be indicted on charges including rape, following a lengthy investigation into complaints by several women. (AP)

70 Afghan Militants Die in Clash

Attack on military base triggers battle with NATO-led forces

KABUL, AFGHANISTAN | NATO and Afghan troops killed 70 suspected militants who attacked a military base in southern Afghanistan, while a roadside blast killed one NATO soldier and wounded eight others, the alliance said Sunday.

Some 100 to 150 militants attacked a military base north of Tarin Kowt in Uruzgan on Saturday, said Maj. Luke Knittig, a spokesman for the NATO-led force. The alliance and Afghan troops fought back for several hours with small arms fire, attack helicopters and airstrikes.

Seventy insurgents were killed, Knittig said, upgrading an earlier estimate of 55 dead. One Afghan soldier was wounded. It was impossible to independently verify the death toll at the remote battle site.

On Sunday, a roadside blast killed one NATO soldier and wounded eight in Uruzgan, the alliance said. Three civilians were wounded. The nationalities of the slain and wounded soldiers were not disclosed.

Saturday's fighting in Uruzgan province came a day after New York-based Human Rights Watch criticized NATO-led troops in Afghanistan, saying their tactics increasingly endanger civilians and are turning the population against the Western alliance. (AP)

Runner Dies in Marine Corps Race

Participant is one of two in marathon who suffer heart attacks

WASHINGTON | A man collapsed more than halfway through the Marine Corps Marathon and died Sunday, and another runner had a heart attack near the starting line.

The race featured 32,118 runners and was won by Ruben Garcia, a corporal in the Mexican Navy, and Laura Thompson, of Boise, Idaho.

The man who died collapsed before reaching the 17-mile mark near the 14th Street Bridge and was airlifted by helicopter to Washington Hospital Center, race spokesman Beth Cline said.

It appears he had a heart attack, police spokesman Sgt. Joe Gentile said. Race director Rgt. Nealis said officials were trying to locate the next of kin.

Nealis said another runner had a heart attack about 80 yards from the starting line. He was revived and thought to be in stable condition in a hospital, he added.

Garcia won for the second straight year, finishing in 2 hours, 21 minutes, 17 seconds and more than three minutes ahead of his nearest rival. He lives and trains in Mexico City but lists Washington as his hometown

Thousands of runners prepare Sunday for the start of the 31st Marine Corps Marathon in Arlington, Va.; one wave started at 8:25 a.m. and the other at 8:40 a.m. The marathon, the fourth largest in the United States, had 32,118 participants this year.

for "The People's Marathon."

Garcia took the lead from Kenya's Jared Nyamboki during the 22nd mile and coasted to victory. Carl Rundell, of Birmingham, Mich., finished second, covering the 26.2 miles in 2:24:22. Jose Miranda, of Washington, was third in 2:26:21.

The 35-year-old Garcia is the second back-to-back winner among the men, following Jim Hage, of Lanham, Md., in 1998 and 1999.

Thompson was timed in 3:00:10.

Brenda Schrank was the women's runner-up in 3:02:28 and Suzanne Himes was third. (AP)

O'Malley Eyes Home County

Montgomery becomes key region toward end of Md. governor's race

WASHINGTON | Baltimore Mayor Martin O'Malley looked at the sea of enthusiastic Democratic supporters at a Silver Spring high school yesterday and was quick to lay claim to his roots.

"It's great to be back in Montgomery County, my home county," O'Malley, who grew up in Bethesda and

O'Malley

Rockville, said at the outset of his remarks at a rally at Montgomery Blair High School.

Both parties are pouring time and resources into capturing votes in Montgomery County, Maryland's most populous jurisdiction, and any hometown claim a candidate can make cannot hurt.

With 273,234 registered Democratic voters in Montgomery County — more than twice the 125,534 Republicans — it is a battle the Democrats can feel comfortable about winning. But the margin of victory will likely play a large role in determining the outcome of both O'Malley's gubernatorial race against Gov. Ehrlich and that of Rep. Benjamin L. Cardin, (D), against Lt. Gov. Michael S. Steele, the Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate. STEVE VOGEL AND JOHN WAGNER (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Cardin, Steele Spar on Iraq, Abortion

Concerns about war are shared but Lt. Gov. blames the Pentagon

WASHINGTON | Maryland Rep. Ben Cardin and Lt. Gov. Michael Steele sparred over Iraq, abortion and stem cell research Sunday. The rivals in the U.S. Senate race debated on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Steele, a Republican, said the war in Iraq is "a mess." He said the Pentagon didn't give President Bush the proper strategy to win the war.

Cardin repeated his opposition to the war, but said he opposed a deadline for withdrawal. He said some troops should come home

Gomez Sends D.C. To Finals

UNITED | Christian Gomez scored in the 86th minute Sunday to give D.C. United a 1-1 tie with the New York Red Bulls, advancing United to the MLS Eastern Conference finals.

D.C. United was outshot and often outthrust by the Red Bulls, but Gomez's goal and another solid game from MLS goalkeeper of the year Troy Perkins were enough to preserve the advantage gained in last week's 1-0 victory at Giants Stadium.

Just when it when it appeared the series was headed for overtime and possible penalty kicks, Gomez gathered a long cross from Josh Gros and put a left-footed 10-yard shot inside the near post. Gros' pass nearly hit United defender Bobby Boswell, who appeared to slip but instead provided a great decoy to give Gomez space to make the shot.

Gomez, a leading candidate to earn MVP honors, also scored United's goal in the first leg last week.

United, which had MLS' best record in the regular season, will host the New England Revolution in the one-game conference final next Sunday. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

McNair, Ravens March Over Saints

35 | 22

Quarterback returns from concussion with a sterling effort in win

RAVENS | Blasted off his feet as he threw, Steve McNair lay on his back for a moment, then propped up his head, grinning after another first-down pass.

In his return from a concussion and strained neck two weeks ago, McNair never shied away from contact, throwing accurately in the face of penetrating defenders or scrambling for key first downs.

By the time the New Orleans Saints figured out how to slow him down, McNair had run for one touchdown and thrown for two more as the Baltimore Ravens snapped a two-game losing streak with a 35-22 victory on Sunday.

"Feeling confident and having the will to go out there and execute" got him off to the fast start, McNair said. "Our offense has been struggling and today was a good day."

The Ravens' defense was dominant as well, accounting for two touchdowns on a pair of 12-yard interception returns by Louisiana natives Ronnie Prude and Dawan

BUSH INJURED IN LOSS:

→ Saints rookie running back Reggie Bush injured his left ankle in New Orleans' 35-22 loss to the Ravens. He said he expects to play next week in Tampa Bay. He was wrenched to the ground by Ravens LB Bart Scott, who then rolled over Bush's legs. Bush limped to the locker room with help from the trainers.

Superdome this season and made it look easy, despite coach Brian Billick only recently taking over the play-calling after firing offensive coordinator Jim Fassel two weeks ago.

"I particularly like the play calls of the two interceptions for touchdowns," Billick joked. "Today was players knowing what it is they needed to do, having worked it properly in practice."

Still, the play-calling wasn't bad, and the Ravens looked comfortable with Billick calling the plays. A good sign for Ravens fans. (AP)

Manning, Wayne lead the way to 2nd straight 7-0 start to the season

FOOTBALL | Peyton Manning and Reggie Wayne picked, poked and plowed their way through a Denver defense that was designed specifically to stop them.

Manning passed for 345 yards and three touchdowns — all to Wayne — and Adam Vinatieri kicked a 37-yard field goal with 2 seconds left Sunday to lift the Wayne finished with 10 catches for 138 yards and did most of his damage against defensive back Darrent Williams. Williams was Denver's first pick of the 2005 draft, a defense-heavy class that was part of an ongoing effort by the Broncos (5-2) to shore things up after those embarrassing playoff debacles in Indy in 2003 and '04.

Denver came in comparing favorable to the best defenses of all time, having allowed only 44 points through six games. Then came Manning & Co., who gained 437 yards to improve to 7-0 and become the first team to start 7-0 in consecutive seasons since the 1929-31 Green Bay Packers did it three straight times. (AP)

Terrapins Not Quite Bowl Bound Yet

Win over Florida State has Maryland in good shape with 4 games left

TERPS FOOTBALL | Being bowl-eligible is no guarantee that an invitation is forthcoming, a fact not wasted on the Maryland football team.

Soon after the Terrapins won their sixth game of the season, a dramatic 27-24 duel with Florida State on Saturday night, an overzealous reporter asked coach Ralph Friedgen, "How does it feel to go back to a bowl?"

Friedgen paused, then stressed the reality of the situation.

"We're not there yet," Friedgen said. "We've still got a long way to go."

Make no mistake, the Terrapins

Maryland running back Keon Lattimore runs past Florida State's Kevin McNeil in Saturday's win, making the Terrapins bowl-eligible for the first time since 2003.

(6-2, 3-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) have already done plenty this season. They've won more games than in each of the past two years, and playing in the ACC title game for the first time remains a possibility.

And yes, the six wins makes Maryland eligible to play in a bowl game for the first time since 2003.

But much depends on how the Terrapins fare over the final four weeks of the regular season.

Maryland concludes its schedule against Miami, Clemson, Boston College and Wake Forest — the latter three of which currently reside in the Top 25. "It doesn't get any easier from here," Friedgen said. "We've got to keep our eyes on the next game and keep getting better."

Big East Teams Move Up as USC Slides After Loss

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | Thanks to USC's fall, the pivotal game between West Virginia and Louisville will be the first top-five matchup for the rebuilt Big East.

The third-ranked Mountaineers and fifth-ranked Cardinals each moved up a spot in The Associated Press Top 25 on Sunday. The two unbeaten teams were off last week and play Thursday night in Louisville.

Southern California's 33-31 upset loss to Oregon State on Saturday opened up a spot in the top five. USC dropped from No. 3 to No. 9. No. 1 Ohio State and No. 2 Michigan remained on top of the AP poll.

Falling out of the top 25 were Nebraska and Missouri. (AP)

Stewart Plays Spoiler in Cup Chase

AUTO RACING | At this point, Tony Stewart is racing only for pride and wins. On Sunday at Atlanta Motor Speedway, he stole the spotlight with a win that made him proud.

Stewart, who failed to qualify for the Chase for championship, held off Chase driver Jimmie Johnson for his second win in the first seven races of the playoffs. Johnson moved within 26 points of leader Matt Kenseth with three races remaining. (AP)

TOP DOGS | SUNDAY'S BEST IN THE NFL

Cards Show Title Is for the Taking

Parity opens the door for any playoff team to win the World Series

WORLD SERIES | The St. Louis Cardinals won only 83 games this season, the fewest by a World Series winner ever.

Count all of St. Louis' victories since opening day and it adds up to 94, still one shy of the Tigers' total from the regular season.

Which is why this is the No. 1 lesson from October: Anyone can win the World Series these days.

St. Louis marks MLB's seventh straight different champion. No matter that 12 teams won more games in the regular season than St. Louis.

"No, it doesn't cheapen the World Series," New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter said during an awards ceremony at Busch.

"The best teams make it to the playoffs, and the hottest team wins," he said.

crown since 1982.

"No one believed in our club," Cardinals shortstop David Eckstein said.

Certainly not when St. Louis limped into the playoffs after a late-season collapse.

But as Tigers catcher Ivan Rodriguez said, "That's baseball, and being in the World Series, anything can happen." (AP)

Sports

Red Auerbach enjoys one of his customary cigars. Auerbach built one of sports' true dynasties with the Celtics, who won eight straight titles under him in the '60s.

Auerbach's Legacy Lives On in Death

Celtics legend changed basketball by ignoring race in pursuit of wins

APPRECIATION | Boston Celtics coach Doc Rivers called his players together before practice to talk to them about Red Auerbach. It was too late to get to know him, but important that the players understood what he meant to the team, the city and the game.

What Rivers wanted to talk about wasn't what the Celtics did, but what they looked like doing it. In truth, Auerbach didn't care what they looked like. He drafted the NBA's first black player, hired its first black coach and fielded its first all-black starting five, and he did it in racially combustible Boston.

"Red did all that, but he wasn't doing that because he was trying to break ground," Rivers said the day after Auerbach died of a heart attack at age 89. "His response was always: 'I'm trying to win a game and that's who I think gives us the best chance."

The message got through, Celtics captain Paul Pierce said. "I don't think a lot of these guys even knew that before Doc said it today," he said. "These guys really have to understand the history of the game. And Red is a big part of the history of the whole NBA — not just the Celtics, but the whole NBA."

Indiana Pacers president Larry Bird said Auerbach was "one of the most influential people in my life." "There could only be one Red Auerbach," Bird said. "I'll always be grateful for having the opportunity to experience his genius. He will be greatly missed." JIMMY GOLEN (AP)

Personal Tech

Jeremy Allaire is founder and CEO of Brightcove Inc., one of the newest Internet video networks that hope to appeal to amateurs and major media companies alike.

Web Video Revolution

YouTube has opened the door for more players in Internet TV

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. | Eyebrows went up when Google Inc. recently agreed to spend $1.65 billion for YouTube, the most popular Web site for free video clips. But that figure could be blown away one day if some emerging companies achieve their much broader visions for the future of online TV.

These companies are building flexible online networks that can host content, serve up ads and dish out interactive features. While "viral" video-sharing sites like YouTube focus on individual clips — many pirated — these new Internet TV platforms are designed to host full-fledged channels that content creators can control.

One of the best positioned is Brightcove Inc., which on Monday is taking the wraps off an Internet video network that handles virtually everything for content creators.

Aiming to serve everyone from garage auteurs to major media companies, Brightcove offers free publishing tools and runs video wherever publishers want it.

That could be on the central Brightcove site, which is accessible through the video search functions at Google, Yahoo and AOL. Or content publishers can use Brightcove to run video on their own separate, branded sites. Or they can syndicate it to third-party Web sites, such as blogs or MySpace pages, where the content might run alongside user-generated material.

All those videos can be sold as paid downloads or streamed for free, with ads.

"They can launch a business in our system in a week," said Brightcove's founder and CEO, Jeremy Allaire.

After a slow ramp-up, more than half of U.S. Internet subscribers now have broadband rather than dial-up. And the explosive growth of video-sharing sites, YouTube included, has helped convince advertisers that the medium has legs.

Another key player in the industry, Maven Networks Inc., is hosting video for customers and giving them quick, mouse-click methods of positioning content and setting up ad campaigns.

Maven's CEO, Hilmi Ozguc, started Maven in 2002 "with an eye to this broadband future" and has raised about $30 million, mainly from venture capitalists. "The whole industry is being transformed," Ozguc said. BRIAN BERGSTEIN (AP)

'SAW' SEEN: "Saw III" slashed the competition in its debut weekend, grossing $34.3 million, the best opening yet for the horror franchise. Martin Scorsese's Boston mob drama "The Departed" held on to second place, taking in $9.8 million.

Serve the Scene

George Clooney's ambitions are artistic, not political

Q&A | It wasn't just charisma that recently earned George Clooney the 21st annual American Cinematheque Award, given to "an extraordinary artist currently making a contribution to the art of the moving picture." With an eclectic body of work, Clooney has distinguished himself in front of and behind the lens, winning his first Academy Award (for his supporting role in "Syriana") and collecting noms and prizes for his sophomore directorial effort, "Good Night, and Good Luck." With three new movies wrapped — "The Good German," "Ocean's Thirteen" and "Michael Clayton" — Clooney spoke about art, commerce and those rumored political aspirations.

How important is it to look at a project from both creative and economic vantage points?

It's not important if your job is simply to be an actor, but if you're going to run a company or direct a film or produce a film, you also have to be involved in understanding how the economics work.

How do you choose projects?
I'll tell you, it's shockingly hard to find a good script. I always thought that when you got in the position when you said, "Go," somebody would make a film ... there would just be this cornucopia of these brilliant William Goldman scripts lying around. The truth is, there are very few.

You've been very upfront about your politics and have championed films with important messages.

This summer, I must have read 20 hardcore political films on all sides of the spectrum, but that, in a way, doesn't interest me. I like things a little more side-glancing. "Three Kings" is a political film, and I liked it because it had something to say, but it did it with a real dark sense of humor.

Are you tired of people asking if you're planning to run for office?
I'd be such a terrible candidate. I have absolutely no patience for compromise. Famous people don't have to compromise very often; politicians have to compromise all the time. It would make me crazy.

Has your experience as a director changed how you work as an actor?
It changes some things, because you learn how your job is to serve the scene and not the character. Actors tend to always want to serve their character. ... Directors go, "I need you to show up here and bring the fruit basket in and leave." You learn much more about how to say, "OK ... My guy wouldn't necessarily carry it in, so what if I come in with another guy and he carries it in instead?" GINA MCINTYRE (THE HOLLYWOOD REPORTER)

Neo-Soul or Blue-Eyed Snooze?

Singer Robin Thicke chases Timberlake — from the couch

MUSIC | The cover of "The Evolution of Robin Thicke" (Interscope) depicts the artist, through a sequence of photographs, rising from a reclined position to a confident strut. Maybe if he hadn't been lying around, he wouldn't always be lagging behind Justin Timberlake in the blue-eyed soul sweepstakes.

Singer-songwriter Thicke scored a minor hit with "Beautiful World" in 2003, a varied collection of worldly hip-hop tunes. On "Evolution," he uses a slower tempo to emphasize sensitivity and sensuality. It's nearly 75 minutes of seductive soul that would surely be considered exceptional if it weren't so obviously derivative.

Of course, the hallmarks of hip-hop excess remain, from gratuitous guest appearances to the obnoxious use of "U" for "you" and "2" for "to," but ultimately the music saves Thicke from himself.

Robin Thicke's seductive soul will rock your body — if you can stay awake.

Contrary to the album art, the music therein seems designed for staying horizontal rather than getting vertical, and that's OK. It's not as innovative as Timberlake's "FutureSex/LoveSounds," which is a shame, but that's OK, too. So what if Thicke didn't bring sexy back; he's just keeping it busy.

JASON HAMMERSLA (THE HARTFORD COURANT)

'HALLOWEEN' How Apropos

Roger Ebert on the 1978's classic horror flick "Halloween": "If you don't want to have a really terrifying experience, don't see 'Halloween.'" # The Crack Came Back

10 years later, the BBC's 'Cracker' hits the U.S. in film form

IMPORTS | It's been a long time since we last saw Fitz in "Cracker," which ran on the BBC from 1993 to '96. Now Robbie Coltrane's forensic psychologist has been brought out of shipping and handling by creator Jimmy McGovern, who did the beautiful BBC miniseries "The Street" and presents a feature-length "Cracker" film today on BBC America.

Coltrane's Fitz is a little bigger now, a little grayer and is Googling Viagra. He lives in Australia, which, given his indoor interests, seems a kind of punishment. With his long-suffering wife (Barbara Flynn), he's back in town for his daughter's wedding.

Fitz is soon asked to help investigate a murder which will lead him to a former British soldier (Anthony Flanagan) grappling with post-traumatic stress. Not from the Iraq war, which crackles from radios and TVs, but from a tour in Northern Ireland, and in a conflict now overshadowed. His flashbacks echo the impossible domestic situation for U.S. soldiers in Iraq. McGovern means to explore this, along with the coarsening of feeling in England at being dragged into American hegemony. Fitz gets the ball rolling at his daughter's wedding.

SCHADENFREUDE: Fritz reveals British discomfort with U.S. power when he complains about 9/11's lack of "dramatic structure."

"News item," he says, "Suicide bomber kills 10 in Iraq. Wouldn't you confess to even a slight tinge of disappointment that not one of them was American? Isn't there a tiny part of you that just wants the chaos to go on and on until they realize they made a huge, bloody mistake?"

McGovern has this shocking an revelatory speech dovetail with the rampaging ex-soldier's rage. His first victim is highly symbolic if somewhat random — an American stand-up comic making nightclub jokes linking terrorizing British soldiers in Belfast to U.S. troops in Baghdad.

It's this that tips the storytelling from sharp and impolitic to something more treacly, particularly when McGovern brings onstage a bullying American lawyer (representing Bush administration arrogance) and the mother of the victim (Lisa Eichhorn, representing our compassionate side).

They're straw dogs, though "Cracker," amid all this, is still "Cracker," Fitz using his trusty empathic powers to forge catharsis on the work front while maintaining a proper mess of his own life.

YOUTH OF TODAY CHEER: Dick Clark will host ABC's "Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve" this year. "American Idol" host Ryan Seacrest will again join Clark, 76, who suffered a stroke in 2004 and missed the show for the first time since 1972.

Suburban Horror

'House Next Door' reveals the terror behind the perfection

BOO! | Lifetime gets into the Halloween spirit with the haunted-mansion drama "The House Next Door" (9 p.m., Lifetime). "House" touches on profound subjects and strikes deeper chords than its chilling subject matter and improbable body count indicate. A childless couple, Col (Lara Flynn Boyle) and Walker (Colin Ferguson), find their rural-suburban isolation ruined when a rich couple decides to build a house in the woods right across the street. But feelings of invasion give way to awe when the stately modern glass masterpiece rises from the trampled wilderness. And Col can't help but feel inspired by, and somewhat attracted to, the architect (Mark-Paul Gosselaar) behind the stunning edifice. It doesn't take long for folks to suspect that all is not right in the big showcase, and tragedy soon befalls the perfect couple next door. New neighbors arrive only to discover that the house invites and incites extreme inclinations that lead to evil. "House" works as a metaphor for suburban horrors — feelings of anxiety, envy and not fitting in a world you've tried to make perfect. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

'HEY, IS THAT ZACK MORRIS?' "House" is more provocative than terrifying.

ON TV TONIGHT

ANNALS OF DISEASE "The Great Fever" on AMERICAN EXPERIENCE (9 p.m., PBS) examines efforts to eradicate yellow fever, the most deadly contagious disease in 19th-century America.

ARCHEOLOGISTS = SEXY An irreverent scholar tries to demystify the Bible and ancient history with his new series THE NAKED ARCHEOLOGIST (9 p.m., History International).

EVERY TROUBLED TEEN SHOULD GET HIS OWN DOCUMENTARY ANGEL RODRIGUEZ (9 p.m., HBO) documents a pivotal day in the lives of a troubled teen and his counselor.

DUDE, YOU LET THE TEAM DOWN The team's savior proves anything but on FRIDAY NIGHT LIGHTS (10 p.m., NBC).

THE NEW YORKER: "Angel" looks at a teen's relationship with a social worker.

CULT CHOICE Bob Fosse contemplates the destructive behavior that drove him (as played by Roy Scheider) to heart surgery in the 1979 musical autobiography ALL THAT JAZZ (10 p.m., Fox Movie Channel). KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Sounds Of Silence

Ecology

One man's crusade to preserve nature's threatened silence

Reclining against the trunk of a western hemlock tree in Washington's Olympic National Park, Gordon Hempton listens closely to the quiet symphony of nature.

Perhaps more striking is what's missing. There is no sound of airplane traffic, campground generators or overchatty hikers — all of which Hempton says are disturbing the peace at national parks across the country.

The abundance of quiet in this small spot led Hempton to place a small reddish-brown rock on a moss-covered log here last year, designating the remote spot "One Square Inch of Silence."

The acoustic ecologist's hope is that by protecting this tiny spot from man-made sound, the entire park will reap benefits. "Quiet is going extinct," Hempton said. "I wanted to find a quiet place and hang on to it and protect it."

National park officials recently released a draft general management plan — including goals and strategies for protecting natural quiet and soundscapes — that will be finalized in the coming year. But Hempton says the draft, as written, doesn't go far enough.

He wants the park added to the Federal Aviation Administration's list of no-flight zones. He also wants the park to hire a full-time acoustic ecologist and to complete a comprehensive sound survey.

But while national parks across the country want to preserve natural quiet, they'll never be able to afford to implement all the changes Hempton wants. So he's helping to pay for the monitoring of the site.

His "One Square Inch" album — an hour of soundscapes from the park — is available on iTunes and onesquareinch.org, with proceeds going toward his project.

"Noise impact continues long after the sound itself is heard," he said. "We aren't really talking about noise levels that will impair our hearing, but we are talking about noise levels that will impair our listening."

Hempton said he found his square inch on Earth Day 2005, when he just kept walking until he got away from outside noise.

"I felt I was being ushered to a place," he said. "I didn't put a trail in to One Square Inch. I just followed an elk trail. It's just such an out of the way, insignificant, pleasant, quiet place to be, I thought I'd place the stone there, and I did."

Communication

ReCellular sends its recycled cell phones all over the world

With the number of cell phones in use worldwide hitting 2.5 billion and rising, recycled phones are playing a growing role in the spread of wireless communications across the developing world, where land lines can be costly or unavailable.

While most used phones in this country still land in a drawer or the trash, a rising number are finding their way to places like Bolivia, Jamaica, Kenya, Ukraine or Yemen, with more than half of them coming from a company named ReCellular Inc.

Based in small-town Michigan, ReCellular gets 75,000 used phones a week — most collected in charity fundraisers — and refurbishes more than half for sale around the world. The remainder are salvaged for parts and reusable materials.

ReCellular executives say they are doing well for themselves as well as for the March of Dimes and other national charities, which collect used phones to raise money by selling them to ReCellular.

“The fact that you can combine a business — a profitable business — with a useful service and a charitable good is a win, win, win,” said Vice President Mike Newman.

Charles Newman, Mike’s father, founded the company in 1991 after decades as an entrepreneur in the retail computer business.

When ReCellular opened for business 15 years ago, it handled 300 to 400 cell phones a month.

“If we’re not doing that many in a few minutes [now], we’re having a bad day,” Mike Newman said.

With Americans trading in their phones for fancier models every 18 months on average, the supply of used but perfectly functional phones is enormous, Newman said.

Millions, however, sit in drawers or closets because people don’t know what to do with them. “Most people would be glad to donate them if they knew they could,” he said.

ReCellular’s loading dock gets a flood of phones in packages large and small. Some come in individual mailers that charities give out to their supporters. Others come in large shipments from collection bins at electronics chains and wireless stores, including Sprint, Verizon Wireless and T-Mobile locations.

Work crews separate the phones from the “spaghetti” of nonreusable wires and cords that are set aside for recycling. The phones are sorted, tested, fixed and packaged by model for resale.

Newman said 55 percent to 60 percent of the refurbished phones it sells to wholesalers end up in the hands of consumers outside the U.S. He said about a quarter of the refurbished phones sold worldwide come from ReCellular.

Refurbished cell phones are opening doors to wireless communication in much of the developing world, where a new cell phone might otherwise be prohibitively expensive, said Michael Blumberg, president of D.F. Blumberg Associates Inc., a consulting firm.

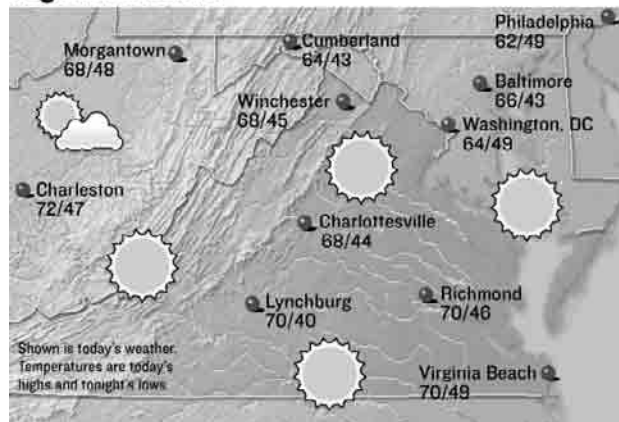

“Sometimes, you have someone in a village who has a cell phone and rents out time,” he said.

HI OLD, MEET NEW: A store assistant arranges one of Carla Fernandez's mod-trad garments at Local, a Mexico City boutique owned by several clothing designers.

Culture Club

Mexican designers merge modernity and local tradition

From a distance, the black woolen jacket created by fashion designer Carla Fernandez looks like a simple, ordinary blazer. The difference is in the details: bright, multicolored dots embroidered to a piece that combines age-old Indian sewing techniques with a modern cut.

Fernandez, one of six designers at the Local clothing boutique in Mexico City's trendy Condesa neighborhood, works with women in the southern Mexican states of Chiapas and Oaxaca to create a product that is local in its use of indigenous design, but also made for a modern woman who wants something stylish.

"What I wanted to do was to use their methods to do something that was very sexy and very appealing to this market," she said.

The Mexico City boutique Colectivo 7 is also owned by a group of local designers.

Fernandez is just one example of several young talents in Mexico City looking to make it onto the international fashion stage by offering modern designs with a clear Mexican flavor. The new crop of designers hopes to take advantage of Mexico's increasingly stabilized economy. Designers say their new businesses are finding receptive customers, both local and foreign.

"The next step has to be Mexico," Fernandez said, noting that Colombia, Brazil and Argentina have already attracted a fair bit of attention.

Fernandez started to form her style while working at a Mexico City Indian culture museum that has since closed. There she noticed the prominence of squares and rectangles in the clothing of Mesoamerican cultures.

Fernandez chose rectangles because rather than cutting fabrics, Indian people tear them along the line of the weave, making curves using pleats and darts in the fabric. She took a gently ruffled skirt off the rack and showed how if its stitches were removed, the fabric would relax back into rectangles.

To help make her clothing, Fernandez works with non-governmental organizations in Chiapas and Oaxaca to organize groups of women in sewing groups that double as public health education seminars. They are paid per item, and can also benefit by preserving traditional techniques while making clothes for their own children.

"They are very happy because it's like making a new story every day," Fernandez said.

Her typical customers are artists, actresses, and others who "dare to dress differently," she said. But they're also people who can afford it — that little black jacket is priced at the equivalent of about $240 and the pleated skirt goes for about $120. KIMBERLY N. CHASE (AP)

Don't Use That Word

Mircodermabrasion occurs when one pays a professional to sand-blast one's face. Ergo, Peter Thomas Roth's MULTI-ACTION ALL-IN-ONE MICRODERMABRASION ($50, peterthomasroth.com) is not microdermabrasion. It is exfoliating scrub. Unlike similar products we've encountered (achooneutrogena!), PTR's formula is more micro, less abrasion. It's a mild, slightly gritty facewash rather than a brutally grainy scrub, and it cleansed almost as well as it exfoliated. HOLLY J. MORRIS (EXPRESS)

Reshaping the National Mall

DESIGN | Heads up: On Wednesday, the National Park Service is planning to release its long-range plan for the National Mall to the public, part of a plan to give Mall visitors a say in the park's future.

According to a press release: "The American public will soon have the chance to weigh in on the use, appearance and landscape of the National Mall. Over the next several months, the National Park Service will compile public opinion and complete a forward-looking plan, detailing how the National Mall will be managed and enjoyed by today's visitors and future generations."

Because the Park Service, congressional appropriators and the public have different definitions of what the Mall encompasses, Express asked a spokeswoman to clarify the bounds of the planning effort. It includes everything between the Lincoln Memorial and the U.S. Capitol, including West Potomac Park and adjacent federal parkland — not just the section between the Capitol and 14th Street. Stay tuned to see what may be in store for America's front lawn.

I ask because growing up, I would count on those months for new episodes but now it seems like there are new episodes every month. As Nielsen rolls out local people-meter technology in more and more markets, sweeps will be less relevant. ### Don't Like It? Don't Read It

IN RESPONSE TO Allison McKee's letter ("Too Much Sex in the Paper," Oct. 27), I have one suggestion: Don't read the paper. This is an option available to all of us, regardless of the media type. I, for one, am tired of those who condemn others for the
